mymobilephone supports CDMA

mymobilephone supports CDMA handsets for some services

mymobilephone.com.au announces it now also supports CDMA handsets for selected services. mymobilephone.com.au is one of the few Australian operators to provide services across both GSM and CDMA networks and handsets.

The following specific mymobilephone services are now supported for both GSM and CDMA handsets:

- web2sms – send an sms message from the web to a mobile
- email2sms – receive email on a mobile
- sms2email. – send email from a mobile phone

Messages sent and received using these services will now operate seamlessly and transparently across both GSM and CDMA networks and handsets. Telstra CDMA customers will have access to the full 160 sms character range while Orange CDMA customers will be limited to 120 characters per sms message.

Support for CDMA handsets is available now.

about CDMA

CDMA stands for Code Division Multiple Access. CDMA is a cellular communications technology which provides similar services to GSM only it operates on different frequencies and uses a different type of signalling technology.

CDMA was introduced in Australia as a replacement for the Analogue mobile phone network. As at June 2002, the number of CDMA subscribers was approximately 830,000. This still represents a small percentage (< 8%) of the total number of mobile phone users in Australia. Telstra and Orange are the only Australian carriers to provide CDMA services.
